

PREPARING FOR YOUR AUTISM ASSESSMENT

Who Comes To The Assessment?

Parents/Caregivers know their children best. We request that both parents/guardians participate in the assessment interview to provide information as well as to support their child. We understand that this is not always possible, but at least one guardian/caregiver must attend with the child.

What Happens During An Assessment?

The appointment takes about 3 hours. You'll meet your qualified clinician who may be a pediatrician, psychiatrist or psychologist.

There are two parts to the appointment:

1. A detailed parent interview where your clinician will ask you about your child's history and development. This interview will take an hour or more. During the interview your child will be taken care of by our qualified child care worker in our play area.
2. An interview with your child/adolescent as well as an interactive observation session that uses toys and games appropriate to your child's age or level of development.

You may have the parent interview OR the child interview first – this is decided at your appointment by your clinician to help create the best possible environment for you and your child. If the clinician is a pediatrician, your child may have a physical exam at the end of the appointment. No medical investigations will be done at this time. If your child is pre-kindergarten age, your assessment may be completed with two clinicians (typically a pediatrician and a speech language pathologist) at the same time in the 3 hour appointment. Each clinician will take turns working with your child and interviewing you.

Following this, your clinician will then decide if your child needs additional assessments to help make a diagnosis and/or understand what supports your child needs. Additional assessments may include: psychology, speech-language pathology, psychiatry and/or medical evaluation. Sometimes additional appointments are booked at one of our partner clinics in the community. If these assessments have already been done in the community, we'll integrate those results into our overall evaluation. Once all assessments are finished, your child's team will meet to discuss the results.

When Do I Hear About The Results?

In most cases, an autism assessment will be completed at this appointment, and no additional appointments will be required. If so, your clinician will discuss the results with you the same day. If additional assessments are required, we'll book a family conference with you to talk about findings, diagnosis, treatment recommendations, and how to access services. You decide if you would like other people to attend your family conference (e.g. representatives from your child's school). Your child does not need to attend the family conference however an adolescent may choose to attend if she/he wishes.

When Will I get My Written Report?

If your child has a positive diagnosis for autism, you'll be given a form (clinical outcome form) at the end of the appointment or at the family conference so you can get help immediately. You and your referring doctor will receive a formal report in 6 to 8 weeks. If your clinician is a pediatrician or psychiatrist this report will be available on myCareCompass website:
