Frequently Asked Questions

Does Shapedown BC work?

YES. Studies have shown that when families participate in Shapedown BC, there is improvement in weight, self-esteem, depression, diet and exercise habits. However, progress varies depending on how open and committed the child and family are to change.

What if both parents can't attend?

Both parents should make every effort to participate. If one parent is more removed from a child, their presence may be even more important. Research has shown repeatedly that a family approach is most effective in order to achieve lifestyle changes. It is only by building on the strength of the family that child obesity programs have their long lasting, beneficial effect on weight. Step-parents, extended family and/or friends or anyone who has a parenting role, are encouraged to participate.

What if parents are not ready or willing to make lifestyle changes?

Then Shapedown BC is not right for the child and family. The Shapedown BC philosophy is that parents should not ask of their child anything they are not willing to do themselves.

Should all kids be thin?

NO. Children come in all sizes and shapes that are perfectly normal. Rapid weight loss or strict diets can affect the growth and development, promote binge eating, slow metabolism and result in weight gain. Shapedown BC is safe. It encourages a gradual, safe weight loss or the maintenance of weight as the child grows. The goal in Shapedown BC is for the child or teen to gradually attain their healthy weight.

Is There A Diet?

NO. Diets typically cause children to feel deprived and, as a result, to overeat. Instead, Shapedown BC supports a balanced approach to food intake based on Canada's Food Guide to Healthy Eating. Families learn how to select healthier foods.

What About Exercise?

Shapedown BC stresses overall fitness, including endurance, flexibility and strength. Children and parents develop a more active lifestyle and replace television viewing and other inactive pursuits with family and peer activities, sports, projects and other interests.
